Disaster Lurks In All Hours For Citizens Of Metropolis

TWO DIE WHEN PLANE BURNS

Youth Shot Down From Passing Auto And Assailant Escapes

(Associated Press)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 24.—Birmingham today was recovering from a week end of disasters in which three were killed, several injured, a downtown store damaged by fire and a daring robbery enacted.

Falling to earth in a flaming airplane, from a height of approximately 2,500 feet, Dennis Gabbert, 26 of Fairfield, and George Byess, 29, of Bessemer, both commercial fliers, were turned to death late yesterday near Bessemer.

Elma Barron, 19, of Bay View, was shot and killed by unidentified men who fired upon Barron and three companions as they were driving along in an automobile near Bay View.

The men, who were in an automobile, escaped. The companions of Barron told officers that they were driving along slowly when another car crept up by their side and fired upon them, the offenders then speeding away.

O. L. West, 25, was injured seriously and Richard McClenay, of Coldwater, Ala., was hurt slightly, when two cars collided at a downtown street intersection. West is in a hospital with injuries that may prove fatal, attendants said.

Two well dressed men escaped with $3,000 in cash from the Hill Grocery company store at 820 19th street, Bessemer, where they forced a clerk to open the door and safe. The clerk told officers that he was there turning on the lights for the night when the men forced him to open the door. Damage estimated at $1500 was caused by fire early today in the heart of the business district when the upper floor of the Dagan-Dunlap drug store was ignited. The cause was unknown.

ASSOCIATION AID HIM IN LONG LIFE

Davis Refuses to Worry And Is Hale And Hearty at 80

Association of the proper sort as a stimulus to longevity is the recommendation of E. J. Davis, of St. Petersburg, Fla., who, at the threshold of eighty, finds himself still hale and hearty. Mr. Davis, accompanied by Mrs. Davis, is here on a visit to their son, Henry R. Davis, after having attended the Confederate Veterans reunion in Birmingham last week. They will go from here to their old home in Columbia, Tenn., for a short visit, before returning home.

Mr. Davis will be 80 years of age in July, yet looks not his age, nor feels it.

He gives no great credit for his splendid physical condition to temperate habits, but asserts he has declined to permit small things to irritate him and has steadfastly refused to worry. This together with more or less constant association with younger men has kept him young, he believes.

Musgrove And Graves Get Endorsement Of Organization

(Associated Press)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 24.—Developments in the state political campaign today seemed to center around the action in making Birmingham and Northern Alabama the battle ground for the next few weeks, both in senatorial and gubernatorial.

Hugo Black and Thomas E. Kilby, candidates for the senate, who have, thus far, been active in outlying districts, were expected here this week to begin campaigning in this section. J. J. Mayfield and John H. Bankhead, other senatorial candidates, are expected to invade this section next week.

Interest in state campaigns was heightened yesterday when six units of organized labor joined with the Alabama Farmers Union in voting endorsement of Bibb Graves for governor, L. B. Musgrove for senate, and W. C. Davis for lieutenant governor.

The Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, the Locomotive Engineers, Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, the Order of Railway Conductors, the Order of Railway Telegraphers and the Federation of Railway Employees were the units pledging their support to the three men. Their voting power is estimated between 25,000 and 30,000.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 24.—Cal Brunner, Flat Top convict, died today as a result of injuries received yesterday when he was struck on the head with a baseball bat by Isom Davis, another negro convict.

The men had quarreled in the mine a few days ago and the row was renewed yesterday above ground, official reports said. Brunner was convicted in Jefferson county on a charge of manslaughter and was serving a ten-year sentence. Davis is serving a life term for highway robbery.

Flat Top lately has been the center of a prolonged inquiry into the state's convict system as it is operated in Jefferson county. As a result of an investigation by the grand jury, six indictments, charging first degree murder, have been placed on the criminal court record.

Andrews Surprised By Panning Of Rule

ASSURES COUNTRY HAS NO INTENTION TO EXTEND SCOPE

CALIFORNIA WILL BE EXPERIMENT

Enforcement Leader Urges Congress To Pass Legislation

(Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Bombarded by criticism from both wet and drys, Assistant Secretary Andrews today assured the country he had no intention of authorizing state and local officials generally throughout the country to act as prohibition agents.

General Andrews expressed "surprise" at the reception given the President's order, which has been assailed by the wets as an invasion over state's rights, and criticised by some drys as resting on a doubtful constitutional basis.

"Giving authority to a man over whom you have not got 100 per cent control is very dangerous," he said, "and I will be very loath to do it."

The executive order was asked merely to meet a situation in California where some deputy sheriffs had volunteered to police river precincts in co-operation with the federal forces. I have no intention and had none of extending this plan throughout the country.

"However, I think the order is perfectly legal and constitutionally sound."

The Secretary predicted that diversion of alcohol to bootleg channels would be stopped within six months if congress would vote the authority and the funds carried in pending administration measures, including a $3,000,000 supplemental appropriation and the Goff dry bill, which would make possible a reorganization of the prohibition machinery.

The government prohibition chief reiterated that President Coolidge's executive order, making possible the performance of such a function by state, county and city officials was intended for the present, at least, for California only.

Supreme Court Holds It Is Without Any Jurisdiction

(Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Holding it had no jurisdiction, the supreme court today refused to pass on a test case involving the right of property owners in the capital to enforce an agreement barring negroes from owning houses in certain residential sections.

In refusing to overthrow a lower court injunction against the sale of a house to a negro woman, the court declared that none of the constitutional rights cited by the appellants had been violated.

The injunction had been secured by residents of nearby houses on the strength of an agreement, signed by 11 property owners in the block pledging against sales to anyone not of white blood.

The case attracted wide attention because of the prospect that the highest court might decide a question which has led to controversy in many cities.

Judge Ervin Takes The Offensive In Drive On U. S. Attorney

(Associated Press)

MOBILE, Ala., May 24.—Aubrey Boyles, United States district attorney at Mobile, whose nomination for the second term was recently rejected by the United States, today was served with an order citing him to show cause why he should not be barred from the federal court here.

The order was served on Boyles as he returned to his office this morning from Washington and was issued by Federal Judge Robert T. Ervin, a witness against Boyles before the senate hearings in Washington.

The order was made returnable on June 7 and cited Boyles to appear before Judge Ervin and show cause why he should not be barred from practicing in the federal court here as government prosecuting attorney.

Samuel M. Johnson, local attorney, was named to prosecute the proceedings against Boyles.

Citation against Boyles is based upon statements made by Boyles involving Judge Edwin during the recent hearing in Washington.

Judge Ervin, was a witness against Boyles when he was up for re-appointment, stating he would not believe Boyles on oath. Judge Ervin stated today he instructed the federal grand jury to investigate charges of violating the federal law by District Attorney Boyles.

The court appointed Joseph John special prosecutor to investigate the charges against Boyles. John was dismissed last week by the department of justice as assistant district attorney. Boyles' second appointment was rejected by the senate Friday.

CUSTOMERS OF BOOTLEGGERS WIN

Court Rules Names Of Buyers Need Not Be Furnished

(Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Bootleggers and their customers cannot be prosecuted under the prohibition enforcement act for failing to furnish the government record of all illegal sales, including the names of his customers.

The supreme court so declared today in a case from Pennsylvania.

The government, likewise, had lost in the lower federal court when it contended that the law requires all persons who sell liquor to make a permanent record of all sales. Two indictments had been found against Jacob Katz, one charging him with conspiring with George Senn and the other of conspiring with Herman Feuerstein to violate the law in the sale of whiskey.

SYNOPSIS

Molly Shannon, university student, has recovered at the home of the Cochran, where Gregory Cochran, bachelor lawyer, had taken her after rescuing her from the river. Molly had been driven desperate by the treachery of Stephen Renfro, efficiency expert, who deserted her and married the wealthy Miss Dillworth. Cochran had introduced Molly to his mother, who is proud and aristocratic, and not too well pleased to have the girl in her house.

Mrs. Parker was like a game little cat, hopelessly cornered, but with lots of fight left in her. "Well, you know, Stephen Renfro he was always at me—wanting to lend me money for you. . . . He knew how bad you needed it. . . ."

"Oh. . . . Molly turned with a violent movement and walked over to the door which opened on the back yard. After a considerable silence she said, "It was he, then, who gave me the money for these. . . . ?" She indicated without looking at them the suit, shoes, hat she was wearing. They were the only respect-able ones she had.

"Well, the distraught fairy god-mother admitted unwillingly, "It began the time your father died. I didn't have a red cent, and you had to go."

"That too. . . . Presently Molly faced round and came toward the book table. "Don't think I blame you," she said quietly. "I know you only did what you thought was best for me. But— I've got to plan some way to return that money. I'll be going now."

In her room at the dormitory she tore the clothes off and flung them intolerantly from her. They were no longer new.

Seventy-five dollars. For all her resources to pay, the sum might as well have been that many thousands. The fifteen dollars she had offered Mrs. Parker meant going without a badly needed raincoat and the sacrifice of some of her most precious books. There was not another book that could be sold, not a cent to be squeezed from anywhere. Her scholarship covered merely the necessities. The little that she was able to pick up from coaching went to her mother. She had never owned a piece of jewelry in her life. Yet somehow Stephen Renfro must be paid.

"Ten dollars—I," she echoed in a small, stammered voice. He shrugged. She could take it or not.

Sitting in her underthings on the edge of the bed, she looked up and caught her reflection in the mirror opposite. Was there anything of her very own that she might sell? She leaned closer to the mirror and scrutinized herself attentively. Her teeth were sound, white—lawless as Stephen had often said. Faint lines in her forehead had sold hers, but that was a long time ago. They couldn't have had false ones then. The obvious asset, of course, was her hair. She took out the pins and let it slip, a shining, blue-black veil far below her waist. It was very thick and slightly curled at the tips. Perhaps they would buy that.

She twisted it up again hurriedly, brought from the closet a frock long since relegated to second-best, pinned on a sailor, almost as old as her own career at the university, and went out.

There were less than half a dozen hairdressing establishments in the town, and at every place it was the same story—repeated with either a condescending or a playing smile for her incredible ignorance. Hair was not being worn. It had gone out of style—this with a supercilious glance which indicated how hopelessly out of the mode Molly herself was. What hair she had used, guests in Europe furnished at a few cents a pound.

But—surely they would give her something for it, she insisted despairingly at the last place. The proprietor shook his head, the while he eyed her curiously up and down. No, it wouldn't pay them to bother with a single lock, not even if she gave it to them. Her hair was quite worthless to every body except—possibly herself! But as she was going away, absolutely crushed, an elaborately coiffed blond head was thrust out of a cubbyhole. Its owner looked once at Molly, twice at her hair, and beckoned to the man. It seemed there was by the merest coincidence a customer who wanted that color—Molly's heart leaped. How much would they give her for it, she asked eagerly.

Oh, by stretch of a point, maybe as much as ten dollars. The man made an impressive gesture.

"Ten dollars. . . .!" she echoed in a small, stammered voice.

He shrugged. She could take it or leave it. They were only anxious to accommodate her.

Twenty minutes later she came out of the shop, feeling light and queer and intensely conspicuous. Her pocket was heavier by fifty-nine dollars. They charged a dollar—this she learned after the deed was done—for cutting it off. Of the avarice and cruelty of the shop-keeping class to those who are in distress she knew a little already. She was to know more.

She was not thinking of that now. She sat down on a bench in the Capitol grounds, took out her small store, and counted it. Fifty-one dollars was lacking still. She put the money back in her bag and sat gazing despondently at the ground. She had nothing else to sell—yet the seventy-five dollars must go to Stephen Renfro before she slept.

After a time, a newspaper, sprawling where some former occupant of the bench had left it, claimed her dispirited attention. She picked it up, glanced listlessly at the front pages, then turned slowly toward the want column.

A half hour later, she presented herself at the larger of the city's two hospitals. To the girl at the desk who indicated one of the apartments in the paper. "The," says that one of your patients needs some blood from a young, healthy person and is willing to pay for it. Do you think he would pay as much as fifty-one dollars?"

The girl stared even more curiously than the proprietors of the hairdressing places had done. Her stare took in the shabby dress, the averted hair, the silent savior. "I don't know," she said, moving away rather dubiously. "I'll ask Doctor Rodney."

Directly, a young and pleasant-faced doctor appeared. He gave Molly a brisk, businesslike once-over, which registered also the short hair, the old dress and sailor—and something besides. "Come in here," he opened the door into an inner office.

He motioned her to a chair and sat down opposite at his desk. "You don't look as if you had any more blood than you need yourself," was his blunt comment, after a second and keener inspection.

"I need the money worse," she said simply. "Do you think they will pay as much as fifty-one dollars?"

"Well, one can hardly put a price on that sort of thing. . . . He shifted a little at the desk to get a better angle. "In fact, it's not usual to pay for such services at all. . . . This patient happens to be a man of means. He wishes to offer some compensation. I can't say precisely how much. . . ."

"Anything less than fifty-one dollars won't do me any good," Molly spoke not less bluntly than he had done a moment earlier.

"Fifty-one dollars. Hum—!—that's quite a lot, you know," He gave her another intent glance. "Just a minute—I'll see. . . ."

Before Molly slept that night a money order, with the briefest of lines in Mrs. Parker's handwriting was dispatched to one Mr. Stephen Renfro at an address in New York City.

CHAPTER XIX

Molly's graduation in June came off in a small blaze of glory. There were, among other things, offers of two Eastern fellowships, but these she did not allow herself the luxury even of considering. Some months earlier she had applied for the principalship of the two-teacher Laws Chapel school. The salary was less than she might have had elsewhere, but she could make it count for more at home—and her mother needed her. Aunt Lena wrote that she had not been so well of late.

Toward the end of Commencement week Chasra brought an invitation to tea. Molly mistrusted that it had been won by a species of coercion, but she did not wish to rebuff his kindness. She presented herself at the appointed hour, and was received in state by the mistress of the place—not more condescendingly, perhaps, than the difference in ages warranted.

Three Cities In Alabama Rise Above The 30,000 Mark in Population, Bureau Finds

(Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, D. C. May 24—The Department of Commerce has announced the estimated population, on July 1, 1925, of those cities which had a population of over 30,000 in 1920. These estimates were prepared in the bureau of the census and are based in most cases on the assumption that the annual increase of population since the census of 1920 has been the same as the average annual increase between 1910 and 1920.

In those states, however, which took a state census in 1925 the estimates are based on the average annual increase between 1920 and 1925. Due allowance is made for any annexations or detachments of territory that may have taken place and of which the bureau has been advised.

This method gives an estimate which is approximately correct for the great majority of places. In a few cases, however, where there is reason to believe that owing to exceptional conditions of growth the figure thus obtained is far from correct, and also

Hartselle News

Evangelist E. B. Farrer began a meeting at the First Baptist church Sunday, which will continue for several days. Rev. G. C. Walker, a former pastor of this church, now pastor of a North Birmingham church will arrive Monday to take charge of the singing. The congregation has been looking forward to this meeting for sometime, and much preparation has been made to make it a success.

It was announced at services at the First Methodist church Sunday, that a revival meeting would begin in July, being conducted by Rev. M. L. Smith of Woman's College, Montgomery, Ala.

The district Epworth League convened at the First Methodist church Sunday afternoon, at 2 o'clock. Delegates from several adjoining counties were in attendance, a general program being rendered at which time much thought was advanced along the line of how to make the league better and exert a wider scope of influence.

Rev. J. B. M. Rice, junior pastor of the First Methodist church occupied the pulpit at his church last Sunday morning. Owing to the fact that the Baptist meeting is in progress there will be no evening services as long as the Baptist meeting continues.

Mr. B. Vaughn, father of Mrs. W. M. Booth is spending several days with his daughter, stopping over from Birmingham, where he had attended the U. C. V. reunion.

A Ford touring car was held late Saturday evening by the traffic cop of Hartselle in which is alleged to have been found about fifteen gallons of liquor.

The officer was standing on the corner of Main street and Bee Line highway when the car passed headed toward Decatur. Seeing what appeared to him to be a keg, he gave pursuit, and overtook the car near the fair grounds.

The driver was placed under arrest and brought back to Hartselle.

The banks of this city have installed poisonous gas pockets in the vaults of the banks, this precaution said to be effective against bank robbers. The gas receptacle is so placed that when effort is made to effect entrance into the vault by any other than the duly authorized person, this gas is liberated and renders any further efforts to rob the safe useless.

Hon. J. H. Bankhead, candidate for the U. S. Senate, addressed the citizens of Hartselle and surrounding territory last Saturday afternoon at the city hall. Mr. Bankhead stated his position on many important issues of the campaign in a clear and concise manner. He made a splendid impression on those who heard him.

Despite the continued cold nights with an excess of rain, cotton and other crops made some progress the past week, and much cotton was harvested getting ready for chopping. It is announced by many planters in this section, that they would begin chopping cotton Monday morning.

The days are warm enough to permit plants to make growth. But the nights continue cold, and are against the quick growth of all farm and garden plants.

A wreck occurred between two cars near the Shoal Creek bridge last Saturday afternoon, in which three or more persons were more or less injured. Both cars were headed toward Hartselle. The rear car in attempting to pass round the front one, side swiped the fender, completely turning it over, pinning one of the occupants beneath it, the other occupants suffering lacerations. The wrecking car destroyed.

The injured ones were brought to was not seriously damaged, though the wrecked car was almost completely torn and medical attention given them. It is understood that a compromise was effected, and the matter closed. The injured were all able to be carried to their homes. Their names were not learned.

L. G. Gulley, with his father, J. W. Gulley of Quannah, Texas, and Mrs. Gulley and the children, motored to Huntsville Friday for a visit to relatives and friends in that city.

In those cases where the last census, either federal or state, showed a decrease, no estimates are made.

In Alabama—Birmingham, Mobile and Montgomery were the cities in the census. Figures showed that on January 1, 1920 Birmingham had a population of 178,806 and on July 1, 1925, 211,000. Mobile on January 1, 1920 had a population of 60,777 and on July 1, 1925, 66,800. Montgomery on January 1, 1920 had a population of 43,464 and on July 1, 1925, 47,000.

CHAPMAN ENCOURAGES STUDENTS TO LOOK UPON THE IDEALISTIC

Overflow Crowd at Auditorium Sunday Evening To Hear Message of Pastor.

Dr. J. H. Chapman, Howard College, Birmingham, in delivering the commencement sermon to the graduating class at Decatur High school auditorium Sunday evening, sounded a popular keynote in educational circles, asking that students press on in their educational realm, believing in idealism and remembering that success is not based upon material wealths.

An interesting program, featured with exceptional musical numbers, preceded the interesting sermon by the distinguished visitor. The service was opened with song, "Onward Christian Soldiers," sung in assembly. A beautiful anthem was rendered by the choir. Dr. J. D. Wallace gave the scripture lesson, followed by the invocation by Rev. R. T. Tyler. Miss Dorothy Patterson rendered a pleasing vocal number, followed by the beautiful duet of Misses Wallace and Banks. Dr. C. C. Davison then introduced Dr. Chapman.

Taking as his text, "Man doth not live by bread only, but by every word that proceedeth from the mouth of the Lord," Dr. Chapman opened his constructive discussion of the duties and responsibilities of the student, after high school graduation.

His talk was in protest of material living as he stressed the ideals of a religious, intellectual, and cultural development. His contrast in material success, the science of mere money making, with intellectual and spiritual development was particularly vivid and forceful.

This brilliant talk was delivered to the following graduates: Mary Martha Aldridge, Mary Elizabeth Bronaugh, Mary Louise Coffee, Joseph Carlisle Broadus, Mary Bethany Fitzgerald, Vivian Booth Fleming, Lucile Poindexter Giles, Elton Hildreth, Thomas Hendrix, Lawrence Lamar Lee, Julia Leigh Lynne, Ina Frances Mason, Eugene Strong Morrow, Edith Allene Murphree, Imogene Mildred Nungester, Melvin Harwood Oliver, Emmie Frances Polhill, Loudie Moore Pointer, Walter Emmett Phillips, Donald Pettus Lewis, Marguerite Taulman Smith.

Rev. J. S. Robertson pronounced the benediction.

Beginning June 20, the Woman's Missionary union of Alabama will hold its annual assembly, bringing many leading women from the state to the summer resort. Record attendances are expected for each convention.

Speakers, teachers and conference leaders from many southern states will take part in the programs of the various meetings. Among the leading speakers are Dr. L. L. Gwaltney, Birmingham; Dr. W. F. Yarbrough, Montgomery; T. J. York, Chattanooga and others.

B. Y. P. U. Meeting Is Held In Flint

The B. Y. P. U. group convention, of which group Will Spanable is vice president, was held at the Flint Baptist church Sunday.

The following program was very helpful: devotional by Irwin Quinn; talk on efficiency by Miss Corine Stevens; the possibilities of a B. Y. P. U. by Rev. E. Floyd Olive; the aim of Morgan County by the Associational President, Mr. Nethery; and why go to Mentone by Miss Elsie Johnson.

Much interest was aroused and the young people were made eager to attend the state B. Y. P. U. at Mentone in June.

The Flint Baptist church has taken a step toward progress. It voted Sunday to have its building repaired and improved.

Rev. Hunter Gives Sermon at Huntsville

Rev. James D. Hunter returned on Sunday evening from Huntsville where he delivered the commencement sermon to the graduating class at Huntsville College. Rev. Hunter did not speak at the evening service at his church, his pulpit being filled ably by Rev. Purcell of Tuscaloosa.

Ten Conversions In Sunday Service

Ten conversions of young people at the morning and six at the evening service, is believed to have set a record for the campaign, it was expressed today by Rev. A. Q. Bridwell declared that the audience was noticeably moved Sunday as the young people took the final step. The revival will continue through this week.

TODAY 12 Years Ago

From the Daily of
May 24, 1914

May 24, 1914, falling on Sunday, there was no issue of The Daily of that date.

The noun "world" must be a synonym for the word "turbulence," if it isn't Great Britain.

Talk not too intimately with thy fellowman, he may demand five dollars you borrowed last summer just after you returned from the annual vacation.

While many of us lament that happiness is as difficult to find as the Lost Chord, we might take lessons from little fellows who live in disheveled structures, with the plainest foods for substance, and dirty faces that smile.

Add bedtime stories—eight of the eleven thugs who are alleged to have looted the Bank of Hartselle several months ago, creating a furor in the little North Alabama town for more than a week, today were brought into the toils of the law.

We often spend lots of time reflecting upon the good fortune of our fellowman, but it is rare when we study his methods of hard work, methods which carried him to his success.

If you still are a firm believer in fairy stories you may own the opinion that Alabama will have a complete system of highways in the next four years, not gravel either, but good solid and permanent highways.

DIFFERENCES OF OPINION

Standing upon a street corner the other day, the writer overheard the remark of a country resident, "My, I wouldn't live in this town, it's too busy to suit me. Look at that stufe over there on the corner, busy all the time, working all day, it's the busiest place I ever saw." That opinion from an outsider.

Inside, many of us, look into gloomy business conditions which do not exist.

We go into a large city and look at the bustle and hustle along the streets and draw the conclusion that the old home town is good enough, not so many dangers there of getting run over by traffic, you get a chance to see your neighbor sometime at home and holler hello to him. Thus do we go, up and down the line, some satisfied, some dissatisfied, but all harboring differences in opinions.

CITIES MAY HAVE A FAIR THIS FALL

These cities are making preliminary preparations for a fair this fall, a fair that is proposed to bring the best products of Morgan county to the attention of Morgan county citizenship. It may be a tri-county fair, bringing in other North Alabama counties, the details will be made known later. Yet, the fact remains that a fair in these communities has been lacking for a great many years. A fair will bring about hosts of visitors to these cities, many of them for their first time to learn of the advantages offered here in trading facilities. To learn that the Twin Cities are proud of themselves as trading centers, as centers of population in Morgan county, one of the largest centers in North Alabama, destined to become the leader in the Shoals district. Fairs always help, when conducted in the right manner. Good advertising results, good folks from over the county, or counties, learn to know good folks in town and the county prospers for his friendly affiliation. The Daily is heartily in accord with a fair for these cities, conducted in the correct manner and displaying the best products Morgan county has to offer, which includes practically everything grown and raised on the face of the globe.

SOMETHING MORE CONVINCING ABOUT THE CURB MARKET

A total of forty-eight producers, from all sections of Calhoun county comprised by far the largest market held since the establishment here a month ago of the curb market. Between the hours of 7 and 8 o'clock buying was feverish, the sidewalk bordering the curb was so crowded that one was forced to edge his way through the rowd and competition among purchasers to obtain early strawberries, chickens and other products was keen.—Anniston Star.

Thus does the Star, splendid Anniston newspaper, tell in its news columns of the advantages of the curb market to Anniston and to Calhoun county farmers. Such material should prove interesting to Albany-Decatur and Morgan county farmers. We have a means of business stimulus in our hands and yet we somehow refuse to take advantage of it. Several months ago, more than a year ago, it was suggested that Albany-Decatur maintain free hitch yards for farmers. This idea never did take, consequently the curb market idea has been allowed to drift, presumably because there was no Chamber of Commerce to see to it that such a good business proposition received attention. The Daily hopes that some good organization in these cities, like the Kiwanis club, or the Junior Chamber of Commerce will soon see a way clear to offer the farmers of Morgan county an inducement to bring their products here and place them for sale. It is a business getter and that is what we are primarily interested in as a growing and live city.

THE IMPORTANCE OF THE OFFICE ON COUNTY BOARD OF REVENUE

In the August primaries now not so far away there are going to be elections of many officials prominent in the state, offices are going to be filled with competent or incompetent, according to the dictates of the voters of Alabama. During the same fall period the county elections will be held and important offices will be filled in the county, yet none are more important than the positions upon the County Board of Revenue. No reader will doubt the statement when the jurisdiction and the scope of the County Board of Revenue is taken into consideration. It is not a position for men of small calibre, it is not a position to be laughed about, it is a position that should receive the earnest consideration of every voter for the kinds of roads and bridges we are to have in the future will be determined right in that small band of citizens. The appropriation of county road funds, the manner of appropriation is left entirely in the hands of the Board of Revenue, it is no small matter to cope with, a business within itself that requires much patriotic spirit and love for the county in which the commissioner resides, and very little payment for the job.

Morgan county's business future depends a great deal on Morgan county's roads, what are we going to have in the future, will it be eight foot roads, so crooked that the horse of the farmer can hardly find the way even if he is given the rein, not reinforced at the sides and lacking in upkeep processes, or will it be straight roads, wide enough for vehicles to pass and kept in the best condition at all times of the year, allowing free travel no matter what the weather condition? This is one of the things to consider in the election of a county commissioner this year, one of the things the voter will determine.

A GOVERNOR WHO WILL DO SOMETHING FOR THE CHILDREN SOUGHT BY MARION NEWS

The Marion County News wants a governor who will do "something for our children." The News also would elect a representative who will lend his aid to the governor in this work.

The Russell Register finds itself spurred by the same desire, but frankly requests the News to point out the man, at the same time emphasizing the fact that a man of the caliber sought may not be found easily.

The Daily wonders if these two excellent newspaper have given earnest consideration to the candidacy of Andrew G. Patterson, of Morgan County. During his two terms as chief of the Alabama Public Service Commission, Mr. Patterson certainly has given every evidence of a sincere desire to deal fairly with the public, and his campaign platform surely gives the News and the Register ample assurance of his determination to "do something for our children."

Mr. Patterson does not generalize in such a manner, but he states frankly his goal will be eight and nine months schools for the rural sections, placing the latter on the same plane and with the same advantages of the children in the larger communities. That flat-footed declaration is answer enough for the Register and the News, but Mr. Patterson goes even further.

He frankly states that in order to accomplish this purpose, it will be necessary to raise additional revenue for the state. He outlines his plans for increasing the receipts of the treasury several millions of dollars, which money would go for the educational institutions of Alabama.

If The Daily may be pardoned the suggestion, it would request that the esteemed editors of the News and the Register take home a copy of Mr. Patterson's platform at some convenient date and spend a time in digesting its features. The Daily believes that in Andrew G. Patterson they will find the answer to their questions.

NOT THE SYSTEM, BUT THE MAN IS CAUSE FOR FAILURE

When a system fails there is usually a howl from the boss, he doesn't usually take excuses from his employees and his dislike for alibi artists is proved in the number of such artists without jobs. Then, it is the cog and not the system that fails. The system itself is working elsewhere and it failure is due to men who are handling the innermost workings.

One of many interesting articles appearing upon system, fundamentally, but in this case with the jury system and its failure is reproduced from the Dearborn Independent:

Throughout the nation the question is being asked with increasing solemnity: Is the jury system a failure? Sober-minded citizens, appalled at the number of unpunished murders and other high crimes, sickened at the sight of criminals, palpably guilty, turned loose in wholesale lots, are inclining to the belief that it is.

Trial by jury is one of the greatest contributions of the Anglo-Saxon race to justice and order. It is inherent in that race; its ancient foundation is lost in the dimness that obscures our racial beginnings. For centuries it has stood as a bulwark against aggression and oppression. It has protected the weak from the strong; it has safeguarded the innocent; in former days it checked the encroachments of the powerful classes. Men by the thousands have died to maintain the right of a man to a fair trial by his peers.

Trial by jury is one of the fundamentals of American law. It was carried into the wilderness by the earliest settlers. While we were a homogeneous people it functioned well; crime was infrequent and punishment was swift and sure. But there has come into the country a vast alien element, unfamiliar with American ideals. To this element there is nothing sacred about the jury system. It is but a means to an end. The jury system is based on the tenet that "twelve good men and true" shall declare the guilt or innocence of the accused. But what if one of the twelve men is not "good" and "true"; what if he is steeped in the tainted philosophy of a decadent race; what if he is faithless to his trust?

The jury system in itself is not faulty; it is not a failure. But it is a system evolved by the Anglo-Saxon race for the Anglo-Saxon mind. The Oriental mind cannot comprehend the principles of honor, of probity, of justice involved. It is not the system that has failed.

In the past twenty years (the years of greatest foreign influx) there have been 170,000 murders in the United States, 118,000 of them unpunished! There is a terrible indictment in those figures, not against the jury system, but against juries. Either we must devise some way of keeping juries pure, or we must surrender one of the greatest heritages of our race. This is indeed a terrific indictment against system, yet it is plainly voiced in the article that the fault for failure lies in the man, the man who is not true to his trust.

The same application can be made in business from an employer to an employee, an employee who is not true to his trust, but who devotes his time to his own likes and allows the interests of his employer to go to rot. The system is not to blame, it is the man who is working the system.

COOKING FOR A BABY REQUIRES SKILL

Food Should Be Prepared so That the Essential Mineral Substances Are Retained, Enabling the Child's Body to Be Sturdy.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

TODAY I want to say something about the preparation of the baby's food. It will not hurt the grown-ups to read and follow the same advice.

Food must be prepared so that the essential mineral substances are preserved. These minerals have to do with the development of the body and bones, the teeth, the fingernails and the hair. Babies and adults, too, cannot thrive without these substances.

The vegetables should be cooked in such a manner that the water in which they are boiled will not be thrown away. It is a mistaken practice in many kitchens to drain off the water which has absorbed the minerals from the skin and fiber of the vegetables.

This is wrong. The "pot likker" is essential to health.

The proper way to cook food for the child is to prepare it with the smallest amount of water possible. When the boiling has been sufficient the cover of the dish is lifted and the water evaporated. By this method of preparation the minerals will be left in the food, where they belong.

Proper attention given to the feeding and care of the infant will guarantee a foundation of health. Upon this will be built a strong and vigorous manhood. Without proper feeding he will be weak and puny as an infant and frail and feeble as an adult.

No task to which she can lay her hand is more important for the mother than proper feeding of the baby. I have told you on other occasions about the preparation of the bottle feedings, but the meals I have in mind now are for a baby between the ages of eighteen months and three years.

This is the period we call the second half of babyhood. It is a vital time in the child's life, second only to the first year or year and a half.

Now begin the regular eating habits of a member of the family who, from this time forward, is to sit at the family table. The child is now to form eating habits which will decide his future welfare. The mother and father must be watchful. They must help to guide the appetite and manners into proper channels. What the child learns now means everything to him and to the next generation.

I am more and more amazed that matters of such consequence should be neglected in some homes. The preparation of the food and the way the child eats it are vital to his fature. They must not be overlooked.

At another time I shall give in more or less detail the particular foods and their quantities which are required at this age. In the meantime teach the child to eat slowly, to chew the food well and to enjoy a glass of milk with every meal.

THE hydrogen electron, charged around its positively charged nucleus with negative electricity, revolves about one thousand trillion times in a second. The atom is small, but even so, that electron travels thirteen miles a second in its tiny orbit. SUGGESTION for cities, Chambers of Commerce, all organizations that want the world to know what they are doing, write to the publisher of the Oakland Times, or to Mr. Carrington, publisher of the Oakland Post-Inquirer, and learn in detail how Oakland, California uses the radio to tell the world about the new $10,000,000 dock programme.

OAKLAND on the eastern edge of one of the world's finest harbors, opening through the Golden Gate, with the great city of San Francisco on the other side of the bay means to be the greatest city and the greatest port anywhere on the Pacific ocean.

That won't happen if Seattle, San Francisco, or Los Angeles can prevent it. But Oakland begins the right way by letting the wide world literally know what it is doing.

OVER powerful radio from Oakland, a programme organized by the city and the Post-Enquirer was sent the city's plans to all civilized countries, including Australia, New Zealand and Japan.

Mr. Carrington, a practical man, celebrated the occasion by printing a 62-page paper with more advertising than the Post-Enquirer had ever carried before. Co-operation between cities and newspapers helps both.

THOUGHT

OF THE WEEK

By J. A. West

THE GOOD OLD DAYS

Ever and anon there is a discussion which arises as to whether or not there were ever any "Good Old Days." The good old days existed as certain as the argument which Chas. A. Dana sent to the little inquiring child as to "whether or not there was a Santa Claus," was convincing. The good old days might be termed to have been in their flower in the days when the trundle bed was a familiar object in the homes of the land, and when childhood said its prayers around a mother's knee, and kissed good-night, completing the busy routine of that childhood for the day, as carefully and tenderly it was tucked under the covers of that little bed, holding on to the hand of its mother until sleep broke away that embrace which completed the circuit from heart to heart.

In the trundle beds of this land slept night after night, children who grew up to be strong men and women, those who thought out the policy and dictated the plans for the very foundation of this government, which has never dared to be tampered with or changed.

In the humble environs of the trundle bed there came forth those who when they spoke on important matters, shook the country from center to circumference. They were the sturdy yeomenry of this country, those who could endure; those who were positive; those who had rather be right than be president.

In the good old days there was a united family who sat each night around a glowing hearthstone where love and kindness went hand in hand, and where helpfulness, and a regard for parental authority were paramount, and studiously observed.

There were flourishing country churches in the good old days, churches es where the citizenship of that community had the time and the inclination also to quit the busy things of life during week days, and the whole family, without any exception wended their way to the meeting house to hear the eternal words of life as spoken by the circuit rider, and where gossip and neighborhood battle were a thing unknown. They went for the benefit they derived. They believed in God, and there was no hair-splitting theology, or no fundamentalism discussed; it was a simple faith, grounded in the fact of a personal savior, girded with a faith that knew no wavering.

These took the time to be holy, and holding on to that line of effort, there was in every community men who stood up to be counted whenever called upon, and these left their impress wherever they worked out their years.

The old homes of this country, many of them now in a fair state of preservation, tell eloquently how well they planned and built on a foundation which stood the test.

The good old days existed when there was neighborhood kindness. Not here and there, but everywhere, this being a very distinguishing characteristic. There was satisfaction and contentment. There was no restlessness. The home was the castle, the haven for both the old and the young and under its roof there was balm for every wound of life and the drift away from its magic environment was the last thing thought of.

For peace of mind, for united effort; for an absence of bickerings and dissensions; for the simple life which stood out eloquently; for the home that was home for "the whole family" for qualities of both mind and heart which could not be excelled. For the old time things in the old time way, there was then and there is now, a strong argument that the days referred to as the good old days, held much that was priceless, and still more which might well be copied in this swift moving age, where modernism has demanded and decreed much that is neither safe nor sound.

MORE THAN A THOUSAND CROWD PRINCESS TO HEAR DR. PURCELL

Forty-five Graduates Hear Splendid Talk From Tuscaloosa Pastor on Sunday.

More than a thousand people crowded into the Princess Theatre Sunday morning to hear Dr. Clare Purcell, Tuscaloosa pastor, chosen to deliver the commencement sermon to a class of 45 students graduating from Albany High school this year.

With superintendent N. F. Greenhill presiding, services were opened with the vast audience singing "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name." Mrs. H. O. Troup presided at the piano. The invocation was given impressively by Thornton Crews, minister of Grant Street Church of Christ. A beautiful anthem, "I Was Glad," was rendered by a large chorus, led by the Central Methodist church choir. Mrs. Joseph M. Pettie, accompanied by Mrs. Troup, sang in her own pleasing and beautiful manner, "I have heard the Voice of Jesus Say." Announcements were made by Mr. Greenhill.

Dr. Purcell then launched into his effective talk directed to the graduating class particularly, but applicable to all classes and ages of people. Dr. Purcell based success in this life upon the foundation of Faith, Magnanimity and Sacrifice, giving applicable historic illustration to each of his cornerstones for success. He told of the faith evidenced by Lieutenant Reid in making the first flight across the Atlantic in an aeroplane. He told of the magnanimity of the United States in paying a defeated power, Spain, for possession which might have been taken by right of might. He spoke of the spirit of Herbert Hoover in aiding Germany when that nation suffered a famine of milk, becoming so serious that women and children suffered. His address was pleasingly given in an easy and forceful manner.

The benediction was given by W. R. Spight.

Helpful Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a young girl in my teens and am in love with a very nice boy two years my senior. We were engaged, but his mother tried to break our engagement. At last he succeeded. We have made up now, and as we wish to marry him, would it be all right for me to marry him?
BROWN-EYED MOLLY.

BROWN-EYED MOLLY: If you are certain of your love for this young man and you share his tastes and interests, there is no reason why you should not marry him. A broken engagement is nothing to worry about if your relationship is built on the sound foundation of real love and true understanding.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a girl in my teens. My friend offered to take me to a dance, but I couldn't get there on time, so I told him I would meet him at the outside entrance of the ballroom. When I arrived my friend was at the dance and had taken another girl with him. Should I drop his friendship?
BLUE HEART.

BLUE HEART: This young man has committed an unforgivable breach of common sense etiquette, my dear, and you must cross his name from your list of friends immediately. In the first place, you should have arranged to have him call for you, no matter how late it was. This would have prevented any misunderstanding. But if this was impossible, he should have waited for you outside. To avoid embarrassing situations like this, please insist that your escort call for you next time, dear. And as for this young man, he is not worthy of your friendship and the sooner you realize this the happier you will be.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a bride of only a few months and my husband seems to love me as he did, only he tries to keep some of his business affairs from me. Please give me your advice.
BROWN EYES.

BROWN EYES: If I were you I shouldn't worry about friend husband's business affairs. As long as his affection is all that it was and as long as your home life is a happy one, don't try to make trouble. Let your husband take care of his business while you take care of your home. That is all that is expected of you!

One-Four-O--Ready to Go

Well, to go on with my story; I was out on the front yesterday, introducing myself to some customers when a gentleman came in and said he had something to tell me.

He said: "This afternoon I was out on the highway tugging away at a flat tire and, incidentally, losing my good disposition when a Travelling Man drove by and asked if he could help me."

"I told him what a fix I was in and he said why don't you call ONE-FOUR-O; they will be here PRONTO and your troubles will all be over so quickly you will forget you ever had any."

"Well, that was certainly good news so I stepped to the nearest phone and called ONE-FOUR-O and told my troubles and they said, WE WILL BE RIGHT OUT."

"WELL SIR, WOULD YOU BELIEVE IT, by the time I got back to my car their YELLOW SERVICE CAR was right there on the job and in SEVEN AND ONE-HALF MINUTES FROM THE TIME I CALLED OVER THE PHONE I WAS ON MY WAY. And I just came in here to tell you that I have travelled thousands of miles and in many different States and Cities and that is the best service I have ever found yet."

I told him we were glad to have him in our city—I knew he was a stranger here or he would have known that such service as that was not anything unusual with

FARM DEMONSTRATION NOTES

There was a community party at the Falkville schoolhouse on last Thursday night, May 17th.

The members of the girls club gave several interesting numbers, among which were piano solos by Miss Alice Elliott and Miss Minnie Lee Sides, reading by Miss Pauline Crowe, talk on club work by Little Miss Minnie Lee Crowe. All of the club girls sang songs and gave some club yells. Games were played during the evening. These were conducted by Miss Hamilton. Members of the ladies club sold ice cream and had a cake auctioned off. The proceeds are to start a fund for a club machine.

The party ended in a most unique way. Mrs. W. E. Clark, and Mrs. W. H. Drinkard, dressed in costumes such as our grandmothers wore, took turn at an old time spinning wheel. They carded the cotton and actually spun it into yarn. This created much interest and all were loath to leave these "old ladies" and their spinning wheel. There were about seventy-five folks present.

COTTON-HIGH

Despite the past poor year for cotton farmers, it was the opinion of observers today that the Morgan County yield will again loom around the 40,000 bale mark this year. They asserted that such opinion was based on the early planting of the product which they declared was being planted in the same quantities as heretofore. Morgan County farmers, it was the opinion, are devoting entirely too much acreage to cotton and too little to food crops.

Both Leagues Gasp As Yanks Continue Consecutive Win Streak; Johnson Loses

Clubs of two major league circuits and the entire sporting world gasped today as news of the New York Yankees' 12th straight win was brought to light. The Boston Red Sox were the latest victims of the hard hitting Yanks. Ruth went hitless, but Bob Meusel and Rip Collins made up for the loss of the Bambino's stick. Collins hit his eighth homer.

The New York club is firmly entrenched in first place, playing a long series at the home ground losing but nine games for the entire season and winning 26. The Yankees today are the Yankees of old, the club which clinched pennants a few years ago even before the other clubs awoke to the fact that a pennant fight was on.

Walter Johnson, veteran twirler of the Washington Senators met more difficulty yesterday when he was knocked from the box in the eighth inning by the fast flying Athletics. Walter had gone well until the eighth frame, the Senators leading until that stage. Philadelphia obtained 10 hits off the veteran, one of them a home run by Simmons. Walter Johnson has won six games this year and lost three.

SHOALS ATTACK IS PLANNED BY FORD

Detroit Will Oppose Leasing Of Project To Power Group

(Associated Press)
BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 24—The Age-Herald's Washington correspondent said:

"Henry Ford, in his Dearborn Independent, to be issued June 6, will fire a broadside against the offer of the Alabama Power Company for Muscle Shoals, it is learned. It is understood that this broadside will constitute Mr. Ford's personal contribution to that issue and will be in the form of an editorial.

According to the report, Mr. Ford will severely criticize the offer of the power company and will by implication, at least arraign President Coolidge because of his address to congress last December in which he evinced impatience with the topic, and depreciated the value of the property to the people of the country."

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 24—Commending the Alabama federation of labor for its protest against leasing Muscle Shoals for power exploitation, former Governor B. B. Comer issued a statement charging that such leasing would be a direct violation of the Sherman anti-trust law and would be "destructive of the interests of the people."

"If the Alabama Power Company and its subsidiaries or its associates secure Muscle Shoals," said Governor Comer, "then there is no calculating where private exploitation will end or the taxes of the people be measured." The former governor charged that the Alabama Power Company is practicing "subordination of the jury" because he said, "it has for the purpose of accomplishing its exploitation of the people extended many largesses to many citizens. Will these citizens recognize this purchase?" he asks, "and join with the power company to secure conditions that will inevitably multiply the taxes on their fellow citizens?"

The money which could come to the government by leasing this property for power purposes is infinitesimal, is Governor Comer's view, and he adds: "In using this power if need be as an experimental station for the manufacture of every fertilizer advantageous to the land, the government could not spend the money to better purpose if nothing was gained except economic information."

Oh! I thought you were Mr. Jones

It's a bad moment—when you realize you've spoken to someone you don't know. Everybody makes mistakes, of course, but no matter how much poise you have, you feel a bit silly anyhow.

The chances are you didn't know Mr. Jones really well—or you'd never have made the blunder. You've never seen anyone you'd actually mistake for your brother or sister or husband or wife, have you? It's casual acquaintance that leads to errors.

People look alike; so do razor strops and flower seeds and hats and pianos. If you want to buy a Jones hat and you know all there is to know about a Jones hat, you're not likely to blunder and get some other hat. The same is true for a Jones piano or a Jones razor strop.

The easiest way to know everything there is to know about such things is to read advertising. The advertisements in this newspaper are here to tell you quickly and truthfully the main facts about the things you buy and use. They are here to prevent you from making mistakes. Mistakes that may be costly.

Read the advertisements faithfully.
They will repay the time.
